What did civic engagement look like in world history? How did people make political, social, economic, and cultural change? Who is included and excluded?

We will consider these questions to support our students to learn more about the history of government and individual engagement in the public sphere in world history. We will work collaboratively to enhance our ability to teach about civic participation. Teachers will learn from historians to deepen their content knowledge, consider archives and sources that highlight citizenship in world history, and develop an inquiry-based lesson. This workshop will offer teachers relevant materials and strategies to bring citizenship into the world history classroom.

Registration

To register for the workshop, visit

https://historyproject.uci.edu/registerforaworkshop/

Register now! The cost is $40.

For more information, contact us at gilbertn@uci.edu or visit the UCI History Project at:

http://www.humanities.uci.edu/history/ucihp/index.php